THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1771.

LONDON, MARCH 30.

Serjeant GLYNN's Speech in Defence of the City of London, and its Magiſtrates.

Mr. Speaker,

THE preſent queſtion is of the utmoſt importance; for it is a conteſt between the Commons and their conſtituents, between the privileges of the Houſe, and the law of the land. Not that I would deny the law of Parliament to be a part of the law of the land. All I mean is, that when it happens to be ſubverſive of the known and avowed law of the land, it is then null and void; becauſe the latter, being founded on the immemorial acquieſcence of the people, or upon acts of the three eſtates, muſt be ſuperior in authority to the former, which has no baſis but the vote of a ſingle branch of the legiſlature. For this reaſon it is that the votes of the Commons were never yet compared to the King's writs. No court is bound to take notice of them. On the contrary, the Judges are bound not to take notice of them, but to act according to the known law. I will not indeed ſay, that they are not to regard your reſolutions more than thoſe of a parcel of drunken porters: But I will ſay that nobody has power to prohibit the Judges in Weſtminſter-hall. The Judges there are ſworn to do juſtice, without paying the leaſt attention to any command under the Great-Seal, or Privy-Seal, or any other ſeal whatſoever. The reaſon is obvious. The people of England would no longer have any inheritance in the common law, if the Judges were to take notice of the votes of either Houſe, and to regulate their deciſions accordingly. And why would this be the caſe? Becauſe the votes would not be always uniform in either Houſe; and becauſe it appears from paſt diſputes, that the two Houſes might differ in matters of importance; circumſtances, that would render it difficult for Judges to determine wich of the two they ought to obey. And, if they obey both, they would be guilty of ſelf-contradiction. Such is the reaſoning of Lord Somers, and of all thoſe patriotic Peers, who effected the revolution. What is the inference to be drawn from it? That men, who act in a judicial capacity, are bound to adhere to the law of the land, and to pay no regard to the votes of either Houſe. Now does not every Magiſtrate act in a judicial capacity? Is not every Juſtice of the peace, every Alderman of London, and particularly the Lord-Mayor, a Judge in certain caſes? Nothing is more indiſputable. In every commitment they are obliged to obſerve the law of the land. If they do not, they are liable to proſecution, and the aggrieved party will recover damages for falſe impriſonment. How is it then that you would, for the ſake of ſupporting your authority and aſſumed privileges, expoſe men not only to the penalties of the law, but to the infamy of betraying their truſt, and of committing direct perjury? The Magiſtrates of London are ſworn to protect the franchiſes of the city, and to abide by the law. Will you obtrude your votes upon them as laws? Whenever you thus encroach upon the ſole right of all the legiſlature, I hope they will have the virtue to reſiſt.

It is in vain you aſſert that they thus take upon them to judge of your privileges. Suppoſe that, under the name of privilege, you would proceed to do things inconſiſtent with the known prerogatives of the crown, with the known privileges of the Lords, contrary to the laws, or deſtructive to the liberties of the people, are not the M giſtrates, is not every Briton bound to inform you, that you have no ſuch privileges? If, by aſſerting that you are the only judges of your own privileges, you would prevent the Magiſtrates and the people from oppoſing innovations and encroachments, you had better at once take to yourſelves the whole government without controul. Put the caſe, that the King had taken the ſame violent ſtep, when his proclamation was ſet at nought. Is there a man of ſenſe in England, who would not have been alarmed for his liberty? Such a ſtretch of the prerogative would have at once reduced the people to deſpair. Yet the King's prerogative is as ſacred as your privilege: Nor can any good reaſon be given why the one ſhould not extend as far as the other. If you have a right to puniſh for a breach of privilege, the King has the ſame right to puniſh for a breach of the prerogative. Both have been tolerated by the public for the ſake of public good; and both will receive a check when they no longer anſwer that end. For what are privilege and prerogative? Diſcretionary powers veſted in the different branches of the legiſlature for the ſervice of the community.

But as they are founded on no law or poſitive conſtitution, they will not be acknowledged, when they operate to its diſadvantage. Magna Charta declares againſt them all in expreſs terms, when it declares againſt all diſcretionary powers, and eſtabliſhes the trial by equals as the baſis of liberty. And nothing but neceſſity would have prevailed upon the people to have ſuffered any court to deviate from this plan. Contempts in court ſtrike ſo directly at their very exiſtence, that for the ſake of ſelf-preſervation, every court muſt be indulged with the power of immediate and diſcretionary puniſhment; though the practice be contrary to the letter and ſpirit of our law and conſtitution. But it is not ſo with contempts out of court. There the being of the court, or the adminiſtration of juſtice, is not in danger of being interrupted. There is full time and leiſure for proceeding according to law and the conſtitution. None of our courts therefore are juſtifiable for treating a contempt out of court in the ſummary manner in which they treat a contempt in court. Why ſhould the Houſe of Commons be exempted from the obſervation of the ſame rule? Will you pretend that, without the power of indiſcriminate commitment, you will not be be able to preſerve your privileges. How is it then that the Sovereign, who has no ſuch power, has not loſt all his prerogatives? The reaſon is manifeſt. The law will preſerve to every man, and every body of men, their juſt rights and privileges. Whence elſe is it, that all the corporations in the kingdom have not long ago been diſſolved? They have no ſuch power; and yet they ſubſiſt in all their ancient vigour; becauſe few men will reſiſt lawful authority, and fewer ſtill will be able to eſcape the puniſhment due to their folly, from the law.

You call yourſelves the Grand Inqueſt of the nation. Has any inqueſt the power of inflicting puniſhment for any contempt which may be ſhewn for it? They never puniſh, they only preſent; and the proper court is finally to determine the matter. Upon this plan was the Houſe of Commons originally formed. It was never ſuſpected that the legiſlative and judicial authorities were not to be kept diſtinct. Whenever the Commons aſſumed this monſtrous power, there was an end of liberty, and the conſtitution. When the Rump Parliament exerciſed the very authority, for which you now contend, it became the tyrant of the nation. It is ridiculous then in you to ſay, that he would be the object of laughter, who ſhould pretend to inſinuate that you are going to invade the liberties of the nation. You follow the ſteps of that Houſe of Commons that was guilty of this enormity. Why ſhould we entertain a better opinion of human nature at this period, than in the days of Charles? Is it leſs ambitious, or leſs corrupt? I have heard ſome of you declare the reverſe. What is the conſequence? The people of England ought to be on their guard, and to oppoſe the evil in its firſt ſtage.

CHARLES-TOWN, JUNE 13.

OUR laſt Letters from Cape-Fear adviſe—That His Excellency Governor Tryon had been joined by General Waddell's Corps on the 24th paſt—That the Inſurgents were daily ſubmitting, and the Civil War in that Country ſeemed to be near at an End——That the Governor intended ſoon to embark for New-York, and would then leave the Command of the Loyaliſts Army to the General—But that, though the Inſurgents had ſubmitted in great Numbers, yet they ſtill appeared to retain an unconquerable Averſion to the Cauſes of their Sufferings, alledging, that they had been driven to Deſperation, by real Grievances, and a Failure in every other Means to obtain Redreſs.

The following is a Relation of the Battle of ALAMANCE, as tranſmitted to a Committee of the Inhabitants of the Town of Wilmington, by the Governor himſelf.

"On Wedneſday evening the 15th inſtant, his Excellency received certain information, that the inſurgents were aſſembled at about 5 miles from the camp at great Alamance, a council of of war being called, it was unanimouſly reſolved to march the next morning againſt them; accordingly on Thurſday the 16th the army leaving the tents ſtanding and all the baggage and proviſions in camp, under the guard of a field officer and about fifty men, began to march at about 8 o'Clock in the morning and advanced to an old field within half a mile of the rebels, when his Excellency formed the order of battle in two lines, a part of the artillery on each wing, and the remainder in the center of the firſt line—His Excellency then ſent one of his aids de camp and the ſheriff of Orange, with a letter to the rebels, requeſting them to lay down their arms; ſurrender their outlawed ringleaders, and ſubmit to the laws of their country; allowing them one hour to accept of the terms, to prevent the effuſion of blood that muſt enſue, as they were at that time in a ſtate of war and rebellion againſt their King, their country and their laws. In the mean time, the army kept advancing nearer to the enemy. The meſſenger ſoon afterwards returned, and reported to his Excellency, that the rebels had received his offers with diſdain, and the general cry among them was BATTLE, BATTLE. Immediately after, a conſiderable body of them appeared in ſight, and waved their hats, daring us to advance. Upon which the army continued moving towards them until they were within thirty yards of the enemy, when his Excellency ſent his aid de camp to inform them that the hour was elapſed, and that he ſhould immediately fire. They called out "that he might fire and be damn'd." Upon the return of the aid de camp, the action began, and an hot fire was kept up on both ſides for about an hour and quarter, when it abated a little from the enemy. The cannon was then ordered to ceaſe firing, and the whole army to advance. Then the firſt line, after engaging three quarters of an hour longer, drove the enemy out of the field, and gained a compleat victory. Their camp was taken, with many horſes, arms, ammunition, cloaths and proviſion.

"It is computed, that the rebels muſt have had killed in the battle, about 100 men, 200 more wounded, and upwards of twenty taken priſoners. The loſs of the Loyaliſts was, nine killed and about ſixty wounded. The number of the rebels from the beſt information, could not be leſs than two thouſand three hundred. Our army did not exceed one thouſand men, of which not more than 600 were engaged. The artillery was well ſerved and did great execution. The behaviour of the officers and men, on this occaſion, will appear by what the governor gave in orders the next day.

His EXCELLENCY's ORDERS.

"The governor, impreſſed with the moſt affectionate ſenſe of gratitude, gives thanks to both officers and ſoldiers of the army, for the vigorous and generous ſupport they afforded him yeſterday in battle near Alamance. It was to their valour and ſteady conduct that he owes, under the providence of Almighty God, the ſignal victory obtained over obſtinate and infatuated rebels.—His Excellency ſympathiſes with the loyaliſts for the brave men that fell and ſuffered in the action; but when he reflects, that the fate of the conſtitution depended on the ſucceſs of the day, and the important ſervices thereby rendered to their King and country, he conſiders this loſs (though at preſent the cauſe of affliction to their relations and friends) as a monument of laſting glory and honour to themſelves and families.

"The dead to be interred at five o'clock this evening in the front of the park of artillery. Funeral ſervice to be performed with military honours to the deceaſed. After the ceremony, prayers and thankſgiving for the ſignal victory it has pleaſed Divine Providence yeſterday to grant the army over the inſurgents."

Laſt Saturday died, much regretted, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, Wife of the Rev. Robert Smith, Rector of the Pariſh of St. Philip, Charles-Town. As did on Sunday, Mrs. Henrietta Stanyarne (Wife of Mr. James Stanyarne) another valuable Woman.

This Day arrived here from Antigua, His Majeſty's Ship Gibraltar, command by Sir Thomas Rich.

The Quantity of RICE exported from hence, ſince the Firſt of November laſt, is 102,710 Tierces; and the Price is Three Pounds per Hundred Weight.—And Twenty-five Shillings per Buſhel is now demanded for INDIAN CORN.
